

The background of the entire image is a repeating pattern of pomegranates and green leaves. Some pomegranates are whole, while others are cut open to show the red seeds. The leaves are various shades of green and are scattered throughout the design.

BRODIE FAMILY

Susan Lupkin

We grew up in a synagogue where volunteers did everything, and my mom helped keep the books. During Yom Kippur they would stop services and ask for donations. My mom didn't want to write during the holiday, so she would take a paper clip and put holes next to people's names so she could bill them later. She loved the synagogue and did everything from running bingo nights to organizing cleaning days.

My parents' love affair always amazed me. Childhood sweethearts, they could not have been more different – dad was a small business owner, with common sense and street smarts who was always planning his next venture. Mom was a creative writer, a poet, a teacher to her core, who stayed in the same house for 40 years so her students could always find her. And she loved animals! This picture (center) from their 55th-anniversary party is one of our most cherished family memories – a time when we all gathered to toast our parents' love which continues to inspire me to this day.

My father loved making crafts; he would make big firework displays on the 4th of July, or electrical zap machines for the Purim carnival, or wooden pens on a lathe. When I was a toddler, my father hung a small leather print that he stamped and embossed by hand which read one of Ralph Waldo Emerson's poems, short and sweet: "Do not follow where the path may lead, go instead where there is no path and leave a trail." I will never forget those words as long as I live, and they will always bind me to my father. May his memory be for a blessing.
